FOREWORD

The American College of Nurse-Midwives (ACNM) is committed to advancing the practice of midwifery and supporting the midwives who provide quality health care for women and families. Making a positive difference and securing the success of the many programs we have in place around the world, takes significant resources. Thankfully, ACNM is a volunteer rich organization with a diverse base of midwives dedicated to the College’s mission. The many volunteers that participate in ACNM’s Board, committees, task forces, and caucuses play a vital role in the College’s governance.

Vital to achieving our goals is maintaining a sound organizational infrastructure — one with solid operational and governance practices and a firm commitment to ethical business conduct. The purpose of governance is to provide strategic, confident, and inclusive leadership, and to create robust accountability, oversight, and assurance for programs and financial performance.

As such, the ACNM Governance Handbook provides general information on governance, strategic goals, committees, and the policies that preside over the activities of the College. It is designed to orient individuals on the role and functions of the ACNM volunteer structure and to enhance transparency of ACNM governance to broader stakeholders. A strong understanding of the principles of good governance and responsible conduct will support the organization in achieving its goals while safeguarding the interests and needs of the overall midwifery community. All members are encouraged to familiarize themselves with the information contained in this guide. The handbook is not exhaustive in its coverage and will be updated as needed. Users should exercise discernment and diligence in its use.

Questions and comments related to the ACNM Governance Handbook may be emailed to executiveoffice@acnm.org.

1. ABOUT ACNM

- Vision

  Midwifery for every community.

- Mission

  To support midwives, advance the practice of midwifery, and achieve optimal, equitable health outcomes for the people and communities midwives serve through inclusion, advocacy, education, leadership development, and research.

- Core Values

  Excellence: The American College of Nurse-Midwives (ACNM) values excellence in clinical practice midwifery education and research. We are committed to upholding the highest clinical and ethical standards, professional responsibility, accountability, and integrity.

  Evidence-Based Care: ACNM evaluates, publishes, and showcases scientific evidence to improve professional practice. We are committed to upholding the most rigorous clinical practice standards in the midwifery profession and applying this knowledge and clinical expertise to help women make the best possible health decisions. We strongly support the use of quality measurement to improve care.

  Formal Education: ACNM promotes the certification of midwives based on completion of nationally recognized and accredited midwifery education programs in accordance with the International Confederation of Midwives’ global standards for education. We support the interprofessional education of midwives with other health professionals to improve maternity care and women’s health services.

  Inclusiveness: ACNM shall carry forward its objectives through a lens that promotes a culture of inclusion in which those of diverse identities are respected, sought after, and embraced. These identities include, but are not limited to, race, ethnicity, culture, class, gender and gender identity, gender expression, sexual orientation, religion, physical and intellectual ability, learning style, nationality, citizenship, age, mental health, professional background, midwifery certification, and degree.

  Person-Centered Care and Respect for Physiologic Processes: ACNM and its members respect the rights all people, including women and gender-diverse individuals, to autonomy over their own health, body, and care. Within a relationship of respect, compassion, informed consent, and shared decision-making, ACNM supports evidence demonstrating that physiologic processes are best supported by person-centered care and midwifery expertise.

Primary Health Care: Midwives value whole-person care through the provision of primary, sexual, and reproductive care to all. We believe this care should be provided with a community health care approach that addresses broader determinants of health and focuses on the interrelated aspects of physical, mental, and social health and well-being throughout the life span.

Partnership: Our members build partnerships with individuals, their chosen families, and communities by providing guidance and counseling in a person-centered decision-making process. We partner with other advocates through collaboration and referral to provide optimal care to further integrate midwifery care into the health care system.

Advocacy: ACNM advocates on behalf of the people we serve, our members, and the midwifery profession to eliminate health disparities and increase access to evidence-based, quality care. We strive to promote standards for practice, eliminate professional barriers, increase funding for education, and enhance the visibility and recognition of the value of midwifery care.

Global Outreach: ACNM promotes the profession of midwifery at a global level. We foster quality and innovation in midwifery education and support the strengthening of the profession worldwide through education and association building as keys to improving maternal, newborn, and community health. (Note: Maternal language is included for alignment with the global health community.)

Equity: ACNM promotes a process by which resources are distributed according to need. Inequities have significant social and economic costs to both individuals and society. ACNM is dedicated to advocating for the removal of obstacles to health, such as poverty, systems of oppression, and discrimination, as well as the consequences of these factors.

Antiracism: ACNM is committed to becoming an antiracist organization by recognizing and addressing historical and current racism in midwifery education, clinical practice, and institutions, including our organization. ACNM opposes racism and promotes racial justice.

Professionalism: Midwives practice in accordance with ACNM’s Standards for the Practice of Midwifery and Code of Ethics, including adherence to the organization’s core values presented here. ACNM promotes civility, mutual respect, integrity, collaboration, and effective communication.
History and Organizational Objectives

The first Annual Meeting of the American College of Nurse-Midwives was held November 12 and 13, 1955, in Kansas City, Missouri. Hattie Hemschemeyer, director of the Maternity Center Association School of Nurse-Midwifery, was elected the first president of the ACNM. In her first message to members published in the Bulletin of the American College of Nurse-Midwifery, she wrote about the driving force and movement of nurse-midwifery in terms equally true today:

“The College must select carefully the work it undertakes and then do well the work it has undertaken. We need to work with dedication and conviction. We are beginning at a time when education has concentrated too heavily on techniques and too little on the human factors involved. It is essential that education relate in a responsible and practical way with the problems and moral issues of our times.

We nurse-midwives are a specialized group and our education, experience, and service have led us to the considered conclusion that in our present society it is neither desirable nor necessary to eliminate specialization. We believe that creative imagination, plus the ability to utilize ideas, is one of the most powerful influences in the world today. The nurse-midwives have not substituted rationalization nor routines for reason; they have not been helpless when it comes to effecting mass movements for the care of human beings where helplessness, faith in reason, responsibility, and the dignity of the individual were concerned. They know the difference between supplying verbal allegiance and action.

We have a pioneer job to do, and if we work as well and as constructively in a group as we have in the past as individuals, we can help to improve professional competence, provide better service and educational programs, and make fuller use of resources. The future looks bright.”

In 1956, both the American College of Nurse-Midwifery and the American Association of Nurse-Midwives were accepted into the International Confederation of Midwives (ICM) upon the recommendation of England and Scotland, as well as the unanimous vote of the executive council of the ICM. In 1969, the American Association of Nurse-Midwives (AANM) merged with the American College of Nurse-Midwifery (ACNM) to form the American College of Nurse-Midwives (ACNM). In October 1972, the American College of Nurse-Midwives hosted the triennial congress of the ICM in Washington, D.C. when Lucille Woodville, then nursing consultant to the Bureau of Indian Health Affairs and past president of the ACNM (1969-1971), was president of the ICM (1969-1972).

The objectives of the American College of Nurse-Midwives, as expressed in the Articles of Incorporation and as amended through May 1997, reflect midwives’ concern for quality health care for women and for infants and to the assumption of the "grave responsibilities" alluded to by Hattie Hemschemeyer that the objectives of said corporation shall be:

- To study, develop, and evaluate standards for nurse-midwifery and midwifery education;
- To support and assist in the development of nurse-midwifery and midwifery services/practices;
- To evaluate and accredit nurse-midwifery and midwifery education programs;
- To determine the eligibility of individuals to practice as certified nurse-midwives and certified midwives;
To facilitate and coordinate the efforts of certified nurse-midwives and certified midwives who in the public interest provide quality services to individuals and childbearing families;

To establish channels for communication and cooperation with other professional and nonprofessional groups who in the public interest share the objectives of ensuring sufficient quality services to individuals and childbearing families;

To establish channels for interpretation of midwifery as practiced by CNMs and CMs to allied professional and non-professional groups on a regional, national, and international basis;

To promote research and the development of literature in the field of midwifery as practiced by CNMs and CMs;

To speak for all members of the College in relation to issues affecting the professional affairs of certified nurse-midwives and certified midwives;

To provide professional services to members of the College.

To promote the College as a leader and major resource in the development and promotion of high-quality health care for women and infants, nationally, and internationally.
ACNM: Operating with Integrity

This policy is intended to supplement but not replace any applicable state and federal laws governing conflict of interest applicable to nonprofit and charitable organizations.
