Maternal Mortality Review Committees vary across states as to: Whether they are permanently established by statute; how often they meet; how often they publish reports and whether they develop actionable recommendations to prevent future deaths; whether they use a common data system or varying ones; their reliance on volunteers instead of designated/authorized members; and their funding.

Implementing Review Committee: In 2018, six states (Connecticut, Kansas, Kentucky, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Oregon) and the District of Columbia passed legislation establishing a maternal mortality review committee; they are in varying stages of standing-up their Committees.

Perinatal Quality Collaboratives: This information is compiled from the CDC Division of Reproductive Health website. See https://www.cdc.gov/reproductivehealth/maternalinfanthealth/pqc-states.html

Current AIM State: The Alliance for Innovation on Maternal Health (AIM) Program is a national partnership of organizations including ACOG that provides evidence-based patient safety and quality improvement resources to states and birthing facilities to reduce maternal morbidity and mortality. AIM started by supporting select states with the highest rates of maternal mortality and morbidity. These states were chosen based on three priority criteria: (1) an established maternal mortality review committee; (2) capacity to collect data and sustain the AIM data infrastructure; and (3) an established, multidisciplinary, state-led body to coordinate the AIM statewide quality improvement initiative. The original AIM states are: CA, FL, IL, LA, MD, MI, MS, NJ, OK, and UT.
